The edTPA National Academy provides support to educator preparation programs implementing edTPA—the first nationally available, educator-designed support and assessment system for teachers entering the profession. The National Academy is a collaborative community of educators who possess a deep understanding of edTPA and practical experience supporting implementation across the nation. Members are endorsed by Stanford Center for Assessment, Learning and Equity and are included in an online database available to programs wishing to find support.
Personalized Support at Every Stage

edTPA National Academy members respond to the individual needs of preparation programs. Support is personalized for programs at every stage of edTPA implementation and can be provided in-person or virtually. Examples of support topics that National Academy members address include the following:

- Introductory session: edTPA 101
- Handbook and rubric deep dive
- Academic language
- Local evaluation and understanding rubric level progressions
- edTPA implementation and support for the change process
- Curriculum inquiry
- edTPA data in action
- Formative experiences for candidates
- P–12 partner engagement and support
